School board splits on charter school waiver

By Pete Gawda

The Thursday, February 5 meeting of the Knox County Board of Education was fairly routine, but the called meeting held before the regular meeting seemed to generate more interest. The purpose of the called meeting was to determine the board's reaction to a possible Christian charter school. Wilberforce Academy of Knoxville had filed a letter of intent with the board to form a Christian charter school.

Tennessee law states that a charter school sponsor may not be "a private, religious, or church school."

The called meeting centered on what Knox County Deputy Law Director Gary Dupler called "a narrow point of law." Dupler said the contention is whether or not the school board could waive charter school requirements. Officials of the academy had filed a lawsuit against the school board. The lawsuit states in part, "state and local officials retain broad discretion to approve charter schools that do not meet all the state law requirements."

Apparently, the board disagreed. They considered, but failed to pass a resolution requesting the Tennessee Commissioner of Education to consider a waiver.

Board member Rev. John Butler stated, "This board does not have authority to grant a waiver. Why are we doing this?"

Chair Kristi Kristy asserted, "We do not create state law."

"We are not the right people to be doing this," was the opinion of Lauren Morgan.

At first, the board voted on a motion to postpone the issue. That vote failed on a split vote. Anne Templeton, Patricia Fontenot-Ridley, Katherine Bike and Butler voted "yes." Kristi, Morgan and Travis Wright voted "no."

It's Girl Scout Cookie Time!

Leslie Bateman and Michael Galyean square off for a delicious competition at the cookie campaign announcement last week. The 2026 Great Cookie Competitors and their cookies are: Strate Insurance Group's Katherine Strate Smith for Samoas; Sherwood Media's Elisa Trentham for Do-si-dos; Knoxville Smokies mascot duo Knox and Jackson for Exploremores; WVLT's Kaitlyn Walsh for Adventurefuls; PYA's Teknovation's Katelyn Biefeldt for Tagalongs; Anakeesta's Kelcey Schenheit for Trefoils; Inside of Knoxville's Leslie Bateman for Toffee-Tastic; Chef Michael Galyean for Thin Mints; and WATE's Amber Lynn Carroll for Lemon-Ups.

Nine local leaders face off in Girl Scouts' 2026 Great Cookie Competition

Girl Scouts of Southern Appalachians has introduced its panel of cookie competitors as the organization prepares to launch the 2026 Great Cookie Competition, a friendly and flavorful showdown to crown "East Tennessee's Favorite Cookie." Local celebrity and business leaders each represent one of the beloved cookie flavors, including the new Exploremores® cookie, and will earn votes by raising money to fund financial assistance for Girl Scouts across the region.

The competition

launches Monday, Feb. 9, and competitors only have about a month to secure donations in an effort to crown their cookie East Tennessee's favorite. "The Great Cookie Competition is a fun fundraising experience for a good cause," said Lynne Fugate, CEO of the Girl Scout Council of Southern Appalachians. "We really appreciate these competitors for taking up the charge and we hope you'll support their efforts by voting with your dollars to help invest in tomorrow's leaders. For example, every

Only minor violations found in KCS audit report

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

When the Knox County Audit Committee met on January 29, it heard a report from Pugh and Associates on the school system, and only minor problems were reported.

Ted Hotz reported on the Internal Schools Fund and suggested a "separation of duties," especially in smaller schools. He said 49 schools were found to have minor issues.

Assistant Superintendent of Business and Talent Jennifer Hammelgarn said there has been improvement in the system. She noted small problems with disbursement of funds at 57 schools, but in small dollar amounts, and reports by some schools involving payment of non-required taxes on some purchases.

She said there were five discrepancies involving travel expenses and two incidents of supplementary salary payments to school coaches, plus two small incidents of credit card misuse.

The Knox County Juvenile Detention Center was discussed briefly in the Knox County Governance Audit. This review also took a look at how Knox County committees and boards are set up and operate, finding that of the 123 Knox County committees and boards, 28 have effectively disbanded.

The governance audit report recommended three opportunities for improvement:

- Knox County could create a central database of all committees and boards operating under the county umbrella.

- Each entity could adopt and maintain a charter and/or bylaws and implement formal orientation and training processes for new board members.

- Entities operating without formal oversight, like Knoxville-Knox County Emergency Management Agency, could develop "clearly defined and documented reporting processes that establish expectations for communication, oversight, and decision-making."

The internal auditor, Zac Fullerton, presented projects underway or planned by the internal audit office, including the Knox County Schools' procurement card audit, Three Rivers Golf Course sales tax audit, the merit board performance audit and a risk assessment for fiscal year 2027. Fullerton also discussed the county fraud, waste and abuse hotline and how anonymous complaints are handled there. He gave updates on the audit office's work on requests from Knox County Payroll regarding taxes on overtime and from Knox County Schools regarding political campaign signage in schools.

The Knox County Audit Committee members are Chairman Matt Warren, Commissioners Larsen Jay, Adam Thompson and Shane Jackson, CPA Jim Morrison and school board representative Travis Wright.

City council rejects neighborhood appeal of large townhouse development

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

The appeal by a neighborhood association to stop a 32-unit townhouse development was voted down by the Knoxville City Council on Tuesday, with the need for additional homes at the forefront.

The West Hills Community Association was appealing the Board of Zoning Appeals' decision on reducing the minimum setback for the proposed development from 20 feet to 9.5 feet, which will permit building the 32 units as opposed to 15 homes. Lee Hume and Larry Silverstein spoke for the association and told the council that the development had been postponed before, and they were told it would be again, so they didn't appear to object at the BZA meeting that approved the proposal.

The association said the 20-foot setback is required in the RN-4 zone, and the developer showed no real hardship in the application for the 962 North Gallaher View Drive property.

Attorney Ben Mullins represented the developer, Mainland Companies LLC, and noted the BZA approved the smaller setbacks unanimously and said the proposed design has the townhomes facing inward with 20 feet or more front setbacks, not fronting West Gallaher View or Mars Hill.

James Lennon, owner of Mainland, said the 32 units are appropriate for the 3.9 acres and will consist of eight buildings.

Councilwoman Debbie Helsley moved to deny the appeal, noting the RN-4 zoning is appropriate for the 32 units. Several council members spoke on the issue, with Denzel Grant citing the need for additional affordable housing. Charles Thomas said the applicant showed no hardship, and 15 homes would be a reasonable compromise. Doug Lloyd, a former BZA member, noted the odd shape of the property and said, "BZA got it right."

The council voted 5-4 to deny the appeal and permit the townhouse complex to move forward. Voting for the denial were Grant, Thomas, Lloyd, Matthew DeBardelaben and Karyn Adams.

In other business, the council approved $60,000 in Empower Knox Youth Mental Health grants for six community-based groups. Councilman Grant opposed a similar motion last month, but supported the grants with some reservations. He said the city needs to "take a hard look at the grant process" and include smaller organizations in the allocation of funds to "be a door opener" for those groups. He said that Girl Talk Inc., which was included in the grant, has members from large companies, and that raises some legal concerns. Mayor Indya Kincannon called on Vice Mayor Lynne Fugate to hold a workshop on the granting process.

In her "Mayor's Report," Kincannon noted the efforts of the city to deal with the freezing weather recently, improving emergency shelters, and the progress on turning the old Giffin School into 77 new homes.

Erin Reed, director of the Knoxville-Knox County Office of Housing Stability, gave an update on the number of warming shelters and overnight sleeping for the homeless.

The Base

"Sometimes the best explanation of the otherwise inexplicable is evil."
James V. Ferguson, MD, FACP

Harold Ford Jr. still claims membership in the Democratic Party, even though that train has long since left the station. That entity no longer exists - at least as it once did. The JFK Democrats of my youth have long since morphed into the Democratic Socialist Party. Even progressives in the Democratic National Committee (DNC) leadership are being replaced by the radicals. The so-called "moderates" and traditional yellow dog Democrats now exist mainly as historical footnotes. And the Trump-hating old guard that is left is actually controlled by the radical base with TDS or worse.

If you doubt me, consider the following statements of those who still march under the Democratic ensign.

Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries says, "Trump is running the most corrupt administration in American History." Seriously? Hakeem is not that dumb, but has become a shill for the radical base, just like Walz and Frey are Somali shills in Minnesota. And then there's the pandering Chris Murphy masquerading as a senator and ridiculously opining, "the lawless Trump administration is intentionally traumatizing children." The dimwit mayor of Boston says, "Every single human on earth has the legal right" to come to the US. The mayor of Chicago says he will prosecute ICE for criminal misconduct. I'll end the seemingly endless parade of Dem-witted duplicity with the "certifiable" California Congressman Ro Khanna, who trots out the predictable Democratic canard that Trump will try to interfere with the 2026 midterms. Hey Ro, at least find something original. You Dems are famous for accusing the opposition of what you are already doing.

The real power of the Dems is their radical base, just as the animation of a puppet is the puppeteer. And you see this unhinged base everywhere: protesting, screaming, threatening, assaulting and rioting. These are the puppeteers who pull the strings of Hakeem and all the Dems.

Chuck Schumer threatened the Supreme Court during the Roe vs. Wade hearing, saying SCOTUS would "loose the whirlwind" if they overturned Roe. The Dems actually released the whirlwind, and now their radical base rules them and threatens us all.

In the 1980s, many of us read "The Road Less Traveled," M. Scott Peck's celebrated and uplifting book about love and spirituality. Dr. Peck later wrote a second, more troubling book about observations of his psychiatric medical practice. I cannot recommend "The People of the Lie" because it is a disturbing vision of evil in the form of pathological narcissism known as narcissistic personality disorder (NPD). Unfortunately, the disorder seems to be all around us.

Narcissism derives from a character in Greek mythology (Narcissus), who fell in love with his own reflection in a pool of water. NPD is a personality disorder where there is an "excessive focus on oneself and lack of empathy with others." Only an experienced psychiatrist should entertain the diagnosis of NPD, but a "grandiose sense of self-importance, interpersonal difficulties, and a domineering and arrogant persona should raise red flags and give any sane person the willies. When I see unhinged Karens and radicals foaming at the mouth on social media or ranting at protests, I have flashbacks of "The Exorcist." Psychiatrist Peck raised the specter that evil exists and may overlap with psychiatric illness.

In antiquity, illness was thought to be the result of sin or perhaps the sin of one's parents. The book of Job is perhaps the oldest book in the Bible and presents these perspectives. Later, Biblical wisdom held that each person is held accountable for their own actions (Deuteronomy 24:16). And even later, illness was considered the result of demon possession as described in Mark 9:17-24. We moderns do not believe illness is caused by sinfulness or demons, but there are things I cannot explain, and Dr. Peck's observations are as thought-provoking as they are disturbing.

Fifteen years ago, I entered a News-Sentinel writing contest and won the right to publish a series of opinion pieces as a community columnist. I can only remember one such column published on April 10, 2010. I remembered that column because the editor changed the title of my essay from "The Barely Civil War" to a politically correct and unmemorable pabulum. I no longer write for the daily paper.

My point then and now is that we are at war with ourselves like never before since the actual Civil War. And the division goes far beyond Republican or Democratic policy differences or turf battles between the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government. For deeper analysis, I recommend you find and read Victor Davis Hanson's piece "Minnesota Ignores History's Warnings," published February 3, 2026, in The New York Post.

Even the conflicts over immigration, abortion, LGBTQ issues and trans surgery pale by comparison to the real ideological battle between Americanism and those who hate everything American. Leftists and Marxists want to destroy the country because they argue it is inherently corrupt, having been founded on slavery.

We fought a terrible Civil War to save the Union and end the scourge of slavery. Yet those who see everything as class warfare and need an enslaved, dependent underclass continue the war. Their ultimate goal is to destroy the country and refashion it as a socialist/communist utopia. Their radical "brown shirts" now march in the streets and on campuses against Jews, Israel, Wall Street, Kings and ICE or for Palestinians, climate change, abortion and trans rights, George Floyd, BLM, etc. I wonder if the protest crowd needs a program to tell them what they are protesting that day. Apparently, the paid protesters are aware and recruited by Craigslist ads which offer $6500-$12,500 a week for leading the mayhem-of-the-day/week.

It is said that "The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing." Although there is considerable debate about the origin of this quote, I nonetheless believe it is true. Patriots must stand up to this great evil in our country. We must always vote, speak the truth, boycott when necessary (I have my list) and pray for strength and courage to persevere and to weather the storm.

Both Parties Have Always Tried To Nationalize Elections

From a distance

By John J. Duncan Jr.

The Democrats and the national media they control got in a big uproar when President Trump said a few days ago that he wanted Republicans to "nationalize the elections," obviously referring to the upcoming midterm races.

The president's critics reacted in horror as though they had never heard of such a thing before and, of course, tried to put the worst possible spin on it.

Actually, efforts to "nationalize the elections" have been made by both parties whenever it is to their advantage to do so, and this has gone on ever since there have been elections.

In fact, almost all the Democratic candidates have been trying much harder than Republicans to nationalize the elections ever since Trump came down the escalator at Trump Tower to announce he was running for president.

Democrats have tried to avoid talking about their unpopular stands on many national issues and instead have based their campaigns almost entirely on Trump hatred. Their platform has been Trump, Trump, Trump, and almost nothing else.

This has been especially true over the last few months since the president's favorability has reached its lowest level.

The Democrats have tried to ignore or refused to admit that all over this country, people are fleeing the high taxes, high crime, wasteful government policies in Democrat-run cities and states and are moving in droves to conservative, low-tax, Republican areas.

Holier-than-thou liberal elitists have tried to proclaim that they are protectors of democracy. There is even a far-left national program called "Democracy Now!" Yet, these same "protectors" had court actions going in 30 states to try to keep Trump off the ballot until the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 9-0, including even the three liberals, that this was unconstitutional.

They overturned a decision by leftist "protectors of democracy" on the Colorado Supreme Court to kick Trump off the ballot in that state. If all these anti-Trump cases had been successful, the more than 77,000,000 who voted for him in 2024 would have been deprived of the right to do so.

Liberal elitists have always felt superior to "the little people" and believe that more people should be appointed rather than elected. Unfortunately, even in Tennessee, past actions by the state legislature have taken away the right of the people to elect school superintendents in some counties, and have made most judges appointed rather than elected.

When President Trump said he wanted to nationalize the elections, all he really wants is honest, clean elections with voting being done only by American citizens. Democrats have wanted same-day voter registration so that it would be impossible to keep millions of illegal immigrants from voting. Their party is becoming more and more dependent on foreign-born voters - legal and illegal.

In a column in USA Today on Feb. 4th, Nicole Russell wrote that a 2025 poll by the Pew Research Center found 83% of Americans favor a law to require all voters to show a government type of ID. She also wrote that a Gallup Poll in 2024 found the same percentage favor requiring presentation of a government ID to register to vote for the first time. Democrats in the Senate have said they will filibuster any bill requiring voter identification.

Right now, the Democrats are trying to nationalize elections based on the unfortunate killing of two people by ICE officers in Minneapolis. Leftist organizations have mobilized demonstrations all over the country against these killings. Unfortunately, they have not demonstrated against the many killings of women and children all over this country by illegal immigrants.

The most dramatic nationalization of an election I remember was by the Democrats a few weeks before the 1990 midterm elections. Their party went on the attack after the first President Bush went back on his "no new taxes" pledge.

A panicky, late-night meeting of the House Republicans was held in the historic Cannon Caucus Room. Ed Rollins was the head of the National Republican Congressional Committee, which was the campaign arm for Republicans running for the U.S. House.

He told us all Republicans had dropped by at least 10 points almost overnight. This meant that a 60-40 race was now 50-50, and one that had been 55-45 Republican was now 55-45 Democratic. His advice was to "run as far away from the president as possible." The White House sent orders the next day for Rollins to be fired, and he was.

Polls before that pledge was broken had predicted Republicans would pick up 20 to 30 seats in the House. Instead, we ended up losing nine seats, dropping from 175 to 166 in the 435-member House, a swing of almost 30 to 40 from the earlier polls.

Trump Giveth And Indya Taketh Away

Last week, a friend of mine told me he was expecting the biggest tax refund he had ever seen. No big businessman, he would be considered a man of modest means and said he was surprised, as it was almost twice the largest income tax refund he had ever received previously. He told me he credited it to the Trump tax cuts. Two days later, he called me to tell me he had just gotten his annual notice of a shortage in his mortgage escrow since Mayor Indya Kincannon and the Knoxville City Council hiked the property tax 40%. That amounted to almost $500 for my friend. The city government still runs no school system, provides garbage pickup, which has been intermittent with the bad weather, as well as fire and police protection. There are no new services, yet the city government finds ways to spend more and more money. The defined benefits packages, which increase annually, for retired city personnel, demand constant feeding, but the real culprit is the mayor and city council who, like their counterparts in San Francisco, New York City and Portland, expand social welfare programs at the expense of working people and the retired.

Unfortunately, while Trump giveth, Indya taketh away!

Grammys Are A Woke Joke

The Grammys have come and gone, and I doubt if anyone will miss them. It was another spectacle of pampered celebrities accepting awards and making political statements. People who are famous for their acting or singing or dancing are celebrated for their talents, not their political commentary. "The View" should serve as a testament to the fact that some people have the intelligence of a grub worm. It goes without saying that those individuals who think the likes of the women on "The View" have anything meaningful to say quite likely share the hosts' collective IQ. While Bad Bunny and Billie Eilish damned ICE, Jelly Roll spoke about his faith and how his wife helped him overcome his problems and personal demons. That was uplifting to the few who heard it.

Billie Eilish lives in a multimillion-dollar home, which is built on land owned by indigenous people in a gated community. Hardly the one to talk about "stolen land." These celebrities have little to fear from criminals as they, by and large, live in gated communities, are rich enough to hire private security and have few concerns about working for a living. Billie Eilish is either too stupid to realize the irony or just a hypocrite when she talks about "stolen land."

The real pity is that too many of these people are so self-absorbed that they don't know the difference.

For The Left, Any Means Justify The End

Perhaps the ONLY interesting thing on CNN is Harry Enten's breaking down polling data. Even then, it is hit and miss, although Enten causes more than a few raised eyebrows on occasion. Recently, Enten discussed a Pew Poll saying 83% of Americans believe that being able to vote should require a voter ID. More than 70% of both Republicans and Democrats agreed as well as 75% of Americans across the spectrum of races, Latino, Black and White. It's not controversial, BUT Chuck Schumer says a bill requiring voter ID and proof of citizenship is "nothing more than Jim Crow 2.0". Really? "Jim Crow" was a practice of desegregating Black people from White people decades ago, as well as enacting "poll taxes," which meant voters had to pay a tax to be eligible to vote, a luxury many Black citizens could not afford. Many Black people were also intimidated and threatened with violence if they tried to vote. Whenever someone tries to tell you today that racism in America is worse than ever, if you are over 40 years of age, you should know they are full of it. There are no separate schools, no separate water fountains, no separate restrooms. It is a non-issue that some try to use for political advantage and to divide our country and our people. When Chuck Schumer cries that any effort to have citizens provide ID to vote is "turning back the clock a hundred years," he is full of it. Simply not true, period.

As to voter ID, any adult knows innumerable things require proper and legal identification. The Left has told us there's no such thing as election fraud. They also told us there wasn't a single penny of fraud or waste in the federal budget. The vast amount of fraud in the social welfare programs in Minnesota puts the lie to that, and that is one state out of fifty.

Election fraud is as old as the first election. It has been practiced all across the country, and we already know there have been illegal aliens, noncitizens of this country, who have voted in elections. The bottom line is that the Left and Democrats in this country want open borders. Every Democratic candidate during the 2020 presidential debates raised his or her hand in support of open borders. Joe Biden made it a reality, and in all fairness, he stated he was going to do it. And for those Democrats and Leftists who want to talk about "election deniers," go look in the mirror. You denied George W. Bush being elected in 2000, you called Stacey Abrams the duly elected governor of Georgia, and you denied Donald Trump's election in 2016.

What open borders are about is votes and power. The net effect of legal and illegal immigration to this country shifted 17 seats in the US House of Representatives and 17 Electoral College votes, which meant a gain of 14 seats in Blue States that otherwise would not have happened. That shifted 10 seats from Red states and 4 battleground states. The Democrats won just 5 seats in the 54 districts where 98% of the voters were American citizens. It was meant to "transform" the country, and it has.

The Left in this country just can't be believed. A shutdown of the federal government, they have told us for decades, was a catastrophe on the scale of the apocalypse. They actually closed the government down and reopened it when they found they couldn't extort President Trump and the GOP Congress into giving them what they demanded. Now they threaten constantly. They went from denying elections to claiming there was no such thing as election fraud, the very same people who claim the Russians stole the 2016 election for Donald Trump.

Remembering Charlie Severance

By Steve Hunley, Publisher
publisher@knoxfocus.com

Charles Maxwell "Charlie" Severance passed away on Friday, January 23, at the age of 86. Charlie was homegrown, born in Fountain City, where he lived most of his long life. A sports standout at Central High School, Charlie went to the University of Tennessee on a football scholarship. Many UT fans will never forget the breathtaking and historic play that made Charlie Severance a legendary player in Volunteer football history. For the rest of his life, Charlie and his wife, Phyllis, remained dedicated Vol fans.

Marrying the former Phyllis Bales, the couple had three sons together, Chuck, Marcus and Michael. Both Charlie and Phyllis would become interested in politics and government, and each served in their own way. Charlie was a longtime member of the Tennessee General Assembly, and when he announced his retirement, he was hired as the assistant commissioner of state parks within the Department of Conservation and Environment.

In Nashville, Charlie was not known to have a single enemy, which is saying a lot for a member of the Tennessee House of Representatives. Charlie was well-liked by all of his colleagues and possessed a quick wit, could tell a joke superbly well, and make a tall tale sound like the gospel truth.

Charlie Severance and veteran County Commissioner Mary Lou Horner ran against one another for a seat in the Tennessee House of Representatives, and it was an epic contest between two popular candidates. Charlie was one of the few who ever dealt the irrepressible Horner a political defeat and was gracious in doing so.

In or out of office, Charlie, like his wife, was a committed Republican, and he continued attending events and participating right up until he couldn't do so. As with everything he did, Charlie Severance gave all he had to his family, friends and life. A figure who always stood out, Charlie appreciated and truly enjoyed other "characters," too.

Charlie Severance was certainly larger than life, and there was nothing small about Charlie or in his character. Quite the contrary, Charlie lived life with an admirable zest.

The Knoxville Focus extends its very deepest sympathy to Charlie's widow, Phyllis, his sons and grandsons, and their own families. It is a gross understatement to say that Charlie will be missed. Life will be duller for his absence in this world, but the angelic chorus in Heaven must be ringing with laughter right about now.

Charlie loved his family and friends, but in particular he loved and cared about people, and they loved him right back. Charlie leaves behind his devoted wife, Phyllis, three sons and several grandsons, Ben and Wyatt Severance, Connor and Garrett Sepesi, Carter and Collins Severance, Michael Christian and Gabriel Severance, as well as a host of loving friends. No one who knew Charlie Severance could possibly forget him.

Betsy Henderson and Steve Triplett abstained. With the nine-member board, it takes five affirmative votes for an issue to pass. Therefore, the motion failed.

The vote on the resolution to request the state to consider a waiver also failed on a split vote. Kristi Morgan and Wright voted "yes." Templeton, Bike and Fontenot-Ridley voted "no," with Henderson, Triplett and Butler abstaining. Once again, the resolution failed for lack of five votes. Therefore, the board ended up taking no action.

During the public comment time prior to board discussion, Lance McCold urged board members to fulfill their oath of office and uphold the state constitution and "stay out of religion."

In the regular board meeting, members recognized officials of the 18 Knox County schools that were recognized as Reward Schools by the state for the 2024-25 academic year. Schools are recognized as Reward Schools when they demonstrate high levels of performance and/or improvement by meeting objectives across performance indicators and student groups.

The board also heard a presentation about proposed improvements in the Powell school district. Predicted growth and traffic congestion will have to be dealt with soon. Studies indicate that building new schools or adding to existing schools is not the best solution. The studies took into account existing enrollment and capacities of current schools and projected future enrollment and determined that the best solution would be to change the boundaries of districts to equalize student population. It is anticipated that at their March meeting, the board will consider zoning changes.

City council rejects appeal

Councilwoman Amelia Parker applauded the efforts to provide shelter during the past two weeks of below-freezing temperatures and called for expanding those services and establishing funds in the budget to help.

The Western Heights and Old Sevier community groups were approved for $650 in Neighborhood Small Grants to support community-building activities.

Numerous re-appointments and appointments were approved to boards and committees, including Dennis Murphy, Ben Ream and Jack Coker to the Better Building Board; Will Dorsey, Mark Grayson and Ashley Beals to the Public Arts Committee; and Councilman Nathan Honeycutt to the Pension Board.

Council members were also appointed to boards on Tuesday, including Lloyd, who was approved to chair the Golf Course Advisory Committee. Helsley was approved as the council's representative on the Knoxville Zoological Gardens board and Grant was chosen to chair the Public Property Naming Committee. Amelia Parker asked to be removed from the Rules Committee.

Three companies, Stansell Electric, Davis H. Eliot Construction and Progression Electric, were approved for $150,000 each to maintain the traffic signal management project. The Salvation Army was granted $205,000 for plumbing repairs and improvements at the Joy Baker Center and Hope Manor.

Proceeds from the fundraising competition go to financial assistance for the Girl Scout experience, including local programming, uniforms and summer camp scholarships.

Each year, Girl Scouts of Southern Appalachians provides approximately $120,000 in financial assistance so that every girl, regardless of family circumstances, can experience Girl Scouting.

The competition will take place predominantly on social media and through community fundraising events.

Visit www.FavoriteCookie.org to vote on the Great Cookie Competition website with distinct links to support each competitor.

Voting begins Monday, Feb. 9 and ends at 11:59 p.m. on March 6.

The winner will be crowned "East Tennessee's Favorite Cookie" at the Great Cookie Tasting, on Tuesday, March 24, at Yee-Haw Brewing Co., located at 745 N. Broadway in Knoxville, from 6-8 p.m. Event registration for the adults-only evening is available at www.Cookie-Tasting.org.

This Tax Season Brings Historic Relief for Tennesseans

Last week marked the beginning of the 2026 tax season, which will deliver historic relief for Tennesseans thanks to the Working Families Tax Cuts (WFTC) signed into law

By Marsha Blackburn
U.S. Senator for Tennessee

by President Trump. This landmark law prevented the largest tax hike in our nation's history—$4 trillion—and includes measures that will jumpstart the American Dream for millions across the country.

On Wednesday, I had the honor of joining President Trump and Treasury Secretary Bessent for the official summit for the Trump Accounts. With the new tax-advantaged accounts, which were established as part of the WFTC, Americans born between 2025 and 2028 will be eligible for a $1,000 seed contribution from the Treasury Department. Parents may contribute up to $5,000 a year, and children can access the accounts at age 18. Based on historic stock market averages, the Trump administration estimates the value of such accounts could range from $50,000 to over $300,000 by adulthood.

These accounts represent a monumental investment in the future of our children and grandchildren, empowering the next generation to invest in a college fund, put a down payment on a home, or start a business. Already, more than 600,000 families have applied for the accounts, and I encourage every eligible Tennessean family to sign up by filling out IRS Form 4547. The accounts will officially launch on July 5 of this year. For those interested to learn more, you can visit trumpaccounts.gov.

The WFTC provides many more wins for families, seniors, workers, and small business owners.

For families, the law permanently extends the enhanced child tax credit of $2,200, with future adjustments for inflation. It also includes my provision to expand the employer-provided child care tax credit—an especially urgent need in Tennessee. According to the Tennessee Department of Human Services, 48 percent of residents live in child care deserts, and nearly 80 percent of working families report job interruptions due to insufficient child care, resulting in $1.65 billion in lost earnings each year. By expanding the tax credit, the WFTC encourages businesses to invest in child care services and help ease these burdens.

The law also strengthens the federal adoption tax credit and expands 529 education savings accounts for both K-12 and higher education, empowering families to send their children to the schools that best meet their needs.

For seniors, the law includes my measure to provide a $6,000 bonus exemption to millions of low- and middle-income seniors, ensuring that they keep more of their hard-earned dollars, including Social Security.

For workers, the WFTC increased the standard deduction—used by roughly 9-in-10 Americans—significantly reducing their tax burden. While lowering taxes on tips and overtime pay, the law allows individuals to deduct up to $10,000 each year on interest for America-made vehicles. The law also levels the playing field for Tennessee's independent music creators by including my HITS Act, which provides additional tax relief for writing off recording expenses.

For small businesses, the law permanently extends the 2017 Trump tax cuts that helped drive growth and investment across Tennessee, including the Permanent Qualified Business Income Deduction and 100 percent bonus depreciation. These tax incentives are estimated to save more than 100,000 jobs in Tennessee.

Altogether, Tennessee households will save an average of $2,600 in taxes this year and see a long-run wage increase of up to $10,000.

Unlike Democrats, Republicans understand that families do best when they have more money—not less—in their pocketbooks. With all the provisions in the Working Families Tax Cuts, every American will have something to celebrate this tax season.

Knoxville Leadership Foundation named BofA’s Neighborhood Builder

Bank of America has named the Knoxville Leadership Foundation as its 2025 Neighborhood Builder® for its work building permanent supportive housing and addressing chronic homelessness in Knoxville by pairing affordable housing with integrated, trauma-informed supportive services.

Bank of America’s Neighborhood Builders program continues to be one of the nation’s largest philanthropic investments into nonprofit leadership development, while providing unique multiyear flexible grant funding annually to high-impact nonprofits.

As a Neighborhood Builder, Knoxville Leadership Foundation is awarded a $50,000 grant over two years, leadership training for the executive director and an emerging leader and the opportunity to connect with nonprofits in a peer network. Since the program’s inception, seven nonprofits have been selected as Neighborhood Builders in Knoxville.

The Knoxville Leadership Foundation is dedicated to engaging networks of organizations and individuals to serve those living in poverty or those who are most vulnerable due to lack of education, employment or resources. Through its housing, workforce development, mentoring and community care initiatives, KLF addresses the root cause of instability while building pathways to long-term self-sufficiency.

Bank of America Knoxville Market Executive Lina Evans presents a $50,000 check to members of the Knoxville Leadership Foundation team as part of the bank’s Neighborhood Builders program. ICE, juvenile center and road improvements on county agenda

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

The Knox County Commission is scheduled to review 38 items at their agenda review meeting next Tuesday, several of which may receive some verbal debates. The commission will meet Tuesday, February 17 because Monday of that week is Presidents’ Day.

The commissioners will decide which agenda items to discuss again later in the month during the Monday, February 23 regular session; most items on the agenda will go to the consent calendar list and be passed with one vote. Any commissioner may remove a consent item for discussion.

One agenda item that will probably see some debate is a deferred resolution from District 9 Commissioner Andy Fox. He’s calling for “encouraging the Knox County Sheriff’s Office to undertake a Memorandum of Understanding for the 287(G) Task Force Model.”

An enhanced Task Force Model would permit the KCSO to go beyond its current policy and identify and apprehend undocumented aliens.

Fox also has a presentation on the agenda entitled “A Christian’s Biblical View of Illegal Immigration,” where he plans to give examples of how the sacred text does not always give undocumented residents full integration into a community. His brief description of his presentation last month drew some strong objections from the audience and some of the commission members.

The commissioners are already commenting and being critical of each other on the Knox County Commission’s online forum. Both Fox resolutions were introduced in January and postponed until this month’s meeting.

The commission is also being asked, on first reading, to approve the creation of a juvenile center advisory board and place the center under the supervision of Juvenile Judge Tim Irwin. Currently, a four-member board of county commissioners is overseeing the facility and making the recommendation.

Several road improvements are on the agenda and may well go into the consent list. One request from the Department of Engineering and Public Works is a right-of-way acquisition of land for the widening of Bakertown Road between Schaad and Ball roads. Other road improvements include the Johnson Road widening project, the Northshore Improvements project between the Concord and Chota roundabouts, stream and wetland mitigation along Ball Camp Pike, and a highway-rail agreement for a crossing at Westcott Blvd. and Crossland Road.

The KCSO is requesting approval of $17,000 from the Joint Law Enforcement Operations Task Force for overtime reimbursement and a lease agreement for 10 years with Corporate Square L.P. for the West Precinct office at 9000 Executive Park Drive.

The commissioners are also being asked to approve $744,983.34 in U.S. Housing and Urban Development funds for the construction of four fixed units of multifamily rental housing for the Everett Pointe development.

A $1,291,600 state grant request from the Knox County Health Department is on the agenda. The health department is also seeking approval of a $70,000 boost from the state for recruiting, retaining and training of public health workers, an increase in tuberculosis control funding from the state, and $150,000 from the state for healthy food environments and safe and accessible spaces for physical activity services.

The Information Technology Department is asking for an agreement with Tyler Technologies INC to renew software at $1.8 million.

Chairwoman Gina Oster is asking to support the Knox County Bridge to Safety program using the Sheriff’s Victims Assistance Fund to receive the monies.

District 7 Commissioner Rhonda Lee plans to honor Janice White for her community service, and the commission may hear presentations from Jeff Bagwell of Rural Metro and Mike Hammond on the Bridge to Safety Program.

What is rural preservation property?

By Mike Steely
Senior Writer
steelym@knoxfocus.com

When the Knox County Commission meets in its zoning session on Tuesday, February 17, it will hear a request from George Ewart asking for permission to rezone a general residential property and change it to rural preservation. The District 1 property is on Riverside Drive.

The rural preservation zone focuses on protecting agricultural land, natural resources and scenic, open spaces from suburban sprawl. This zoning aims to limit development to agriculture and agritourism, requiring minimum lot sizes of 15 acres.

George Ewart submitted the zoning change request for the property owner, Karen Claussen. The 64.82-acre site is near Holston Hill Road.

The zoning session will also hear three multi-unit housing requests from developers, with Mesana Investments LLC asking to change 7716 Strawberry Plains Pike from agricultural to planned residential to build nine dwelling units per acre. Clean Slate Realty LLC is asking for 2.5 units per acre at 9717 Ball Camp School Road and Smart Hospitality LLC is asking to change 1215 Everett Road to planned residential for 12 units per acre.

Benjamin Mullins is requesting to change several properties from general business and agricultural to the office designation. The properties are at 9247 Floyd Lane and 9226, 9228 and 9232 Dutchtown Road.

Abdulrahman Qasem is asking for a change from agricultural to low-density residential for 1402 Andes Road, and SH Build Group Team is asking to change a Lovell Road property from neighborhood commercial to planned residential.

The commission may also discuss changes to the Knox County Code related to vested rights following recent changes in the Knox County Comprehensive Plan. The second reading of the change was recommended by the planning commission and was postponed in their January session by District 5 Commissioner Angela Russell.

No interest in award shows

I'm snugly tucked into my porch office. Since the room has no HVAC vent, the tiny heater I use is working overtime to keep the cold away. The Grammy Awards are playing on the television in the family room, but I have no interest in watching even a second of it.

Why should I watch? I took a look at the list of nominees in different categories, and I can honestly say that I've listened to music from one artist: Lady Gaga. I scrolled through all the lists and did recognize a few names in the country music section, but I couldn't identify a single song on the list that I've heard.

One reason I don't know today's music is that I fortunately have Sirius radio in my car. My selection of channels includes the 60s, the 70s, classic country and the blend station. Those stations play songs from my earlier years, beginning when I began listening to the AM and FM stations in eighth grade. By the mid-80s, I had moved to country music during the heydays of such artists as Dolly Parton, Kenny Rogers and Randy Travis.

My interest in new music ended when electronically-altered voices and other strange noises were introduced. I prefer normal instruments and human voices in the music I hear. My mind cannot decipher what other devices are trying to add to music.

The next comment I make will offend some folks, and for that, I apologize. I don't like rap, hip-hop, flow, or MCs. They are all names for the genre. I consider this category as art, but not music. Talking with a beat in the back isn't what we oldsters consider true music. Yes, it is a prejudice, but not a racial or cultural one. I prefer to label it as a choice of music.

I remember when I was a child and went to stores with elevators. Most of the Muzak selections were tunes from my parents' generation. I dreaded being trapped in a small space and being forced to listen to that stuff. No doubt, those who like rap feel the same way when the music I like blares from speakers. Of course, I avoid listening to talk that is so fast that I rarely understand what is being said.

I pay no more attention to the Golden Globe, Emmy and Oscar awards. I know more of the actors and actresses in those media, but that knowledge is limited to the older entertainers. I just don't care who wins. I like shows and movies for themselves, not for the performers. Rarely are the awarded movies ones that I would choose to watch. Most of us don't pay good money for "art" in movies; instead, we pay to be entertained.

I remind myself of my mother when it comes to television watching. She thought "Matlock" reruns were the best shows on television. My choice of viewing most often is YouTube. I suppose my attention span is shortening. I would rather watch several different clips than invest large blocks of time watching a boring movie. However, "The Pitt" is a fantastic series, and movies with Denzel Washington captivate me. I've even been watching a series featuring Will Smith on National Geographic. My years are making me jumpy when it comes to television viewing.

Congratulations to the winners of the Grammy Awards. Don't bother to tell me who they are because I won't know them anyway.

The Aristocrat in Politics

Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania

Pages from the Past

By Ray Hill
rayhill865@gmail.com

Gifford Pinchot (pronounced Pin-Show) was the epitome of the aristocrat in politics. Immensely wealthy, Pinchot dedicated himself to conservation and was a perennial office seeker. The future governor was motivated to participate in politics for a number of reasons, which included his admiration of Theodore Roosevelt and his fervent belief in the conservation of America's forests. Pinchot was a resident of Pennsylvania, one of the most boss-ridden states in the country. The master of the Pennsylvania political machine was wealthy, corpulent Boies Penrose, who sat in the United States Senate. A powerful political machine operated in Philadelphia under Congressman William Vare. The Vare machine was unusual in that, unlike virtually every other urban big-city machine in the country, it was Republican rather than Democratic. The machine was so powerful it nominated James Montgomery Beck for a seat in Congress to represent a working-class district. Beck did not live in the district or even the state; Beck was a resident of Washington, D.C. Beck rented what TIME magazine referred to as "a sleazy apartment in a poor district of Philadelphia which he never occupied." Beck's presidency was challenged, but he was seated after having won the election.

Gifford Pinchot was married to Cornelia Bryce, a red-headed, formidable and accomplished woman in her own right. Called "Leila" by her friends and family, Cornelia Bryce Pinchot was an ardent advocate for the rights of women and like her husband, was an outspoken progressive. She and Gifford lived at Gray Towers, the ancestral home of the Pinchot family. Like most everything else she encountered, Cornelia Bryce Pinchot left her mark on Gray Towers as well.

Gray Towers was designed and built by famed architect Richard Morris Hunt, who was responsible for Biltmore House and quite a few of the remarkable "cottages" on Millionaires' Row in Newport, Rhode Island. Gray Towers was built in the style of a French chateau, originally situated on 303 acres with numerous other outbuildings built on the property. Gray Tower sat atop a gentle slope in Milford, Pennsylvania, overlooking the Delaware River. After Cornelia Bryce Pinchot's death, her son donated Gray Towers to the government of the United States.

Both of Gifford's parents came from successful families and his mother, Mary, was the daughter of Amos Eno, one of the richest developers in New York City. Pinchot's interest in forestry was encouraged by his parents, and apparently, his father suggested he become a forester. It was while managing the forests surrounding Biltmore House that Pinchot fell in love. The object of his affection was Laura Houghteling, whose family lived nearby. The two were engaged to be married, but Laura tragically died of tuberculosis before they could be married. Pinchot's grief was deep and profound. At the time, when someone lost a loved one, he or she wore dark clothes as a sign of being in mourning. Pinchot wore mourning clothes for several years after Laura's death and did not marry for 20 years.

Gifford Pinchot and Cornelia Bryce became acquainted through their mutual work on behalf of progressive causes, and the two were married in 1914. Their union produced one child, Gifford Bryce Pinchot. Cornelia Pinchot was as interested in politics as was her husband. At least three times she ran for the GOP nomination for the House of Representatives, losing each time. Mrs. Pinchot was an independent and very outspoken woman for her time.

By 1898, Pinchot was head of the Division of Forestry inside the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Gifford Pinchot took what was then the somewhat unusual position that the federal government should protect and conserve the country's natural resources, a policy that was opposed to those who had previously occupied his position. Pinchot's view of forestry and conservation met a kindred soul in Theodore Roosevelt, who assumed the presidency following the assassination of William McKinley in 1901. The two became friends, and together they lobbied Congress to create the United States Forest Service. That federal agency was charged with overseeing the forest reserves of the country, and President Roosevelt named Pinchot as the first Chief Forester of the United States.

Pinchot continued as America's chief forester under the administration of William Howard Taft, but the two did not have a close relationship. Taft mistrusted Pinchot, whom the chief executive thought was "a strange combination" of a "socialist and spiritualist." Taft thought Pinchot was "capable of any extreme act," and the president frowned upon those occasions when he felt the chief forester was acting beyond his authority under the law. Eventually, Gifford Former Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania announcing he would again seek the governorship in 1930.

Pinchot intervened on behalf of an Interior Department employee who was upset about Secretary Richard Ballinger having approved claims to mine disputed coal in Alaska. Pinchot was very vocal in his criticisms of Secretary Ballinger and was eventually fired by President Taft for insubordination.

Pinchot sought out former President Theodore Roosevelt when the two were traveling in Europe and discussed his dismissal. Gifford Pinchot delightedly bolted the Republican Party to become a Progressive and gleefully supported the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt against William Howard Taft. Splitting the Republican Party asunder, neither won, and allowed Democratic nominee Woodrow Wilson win the election with a plurality of the vote.

Pinchot continued to affiliate with the Progressive Party and was the nominee against GOP incumbent U.S. Senator Boies Penrose in the 1914 election. Senator Penrose won easily, although Pinchot tallied more votes than the Democratic nominee.

Like most of the others who followed Theodore Roosevelt out of the Republican Party, they followed him back into the GOP. Pinchot supported the candidacy of Warren Harding in 1920. There was no appointment to any office forthcoming from the Harding administration, but Pinchot did receive an appointment from Governor William Sproul to serve as the head of Pennsylvania's forest commission in 1920. Working with his customary zeal, Pinchot quickly lobbied the legislature successfully for more money, weeded out political appointees and replaced them with professionals, and streamlined the effectiveness of the commission.

Pinchot announced his candidacy to become governor of Pennsylvania when he entered the Republican primary in 1922. Pinchot only narrowly edged out George Alter for the GOP nomination by just over 9,000 votes out more than a million cast. In the general election, Gifford Pinchot won by more than 250,000 votes, tallying more than 56% of the ballots cast.

Governor Pinchot was faced with a bitter coal strike during the first year he was in office. He worked to settle it as quickly as possible, summoning both owners and workers to the state capitol. The governor located the mine owners in one room and the workers and their representatives in another. The tall and lanky governor shuttled back and forth between the rooms as he tried to negotiate an agreement. Pinchot took elements from both sides and helped to craft a compromise which both sides eventually accepted, albeit both complained they had been done an injustice. Perhaps it was indicative of a truly fair settlement.

"I made no threat whatever," Pinchot told newsmen. "The settlement was brought about by my insistence that the principles proposed were right and just." Pinchot had helped to end the strike just one week after it had started.

When Gifford Pinchot assumed office as governor, the state was operating with a deficit in its treasury of some $32 million, a considerable sum for the time. Pinchot worked hard to balance the books and by the time he left office, the governor had Pennsylvania running in the black and left a surplus of more than $6 million.

Pinchot was viewed by some as the progressive alternative to President Calvin Coolidge, who had succeeded to the White House following the sudden death of Warren Harding. Ironically, it was Pinchot's work with the coal strike that helped to derail his presidential ambitions. As a result of the settlement proposed by Governor Pinchot, coal prices rose steadily, which was much resented by consumers.

At the time, Pennsylvania did not allow its governors to seek a second consecutive term in office. Barred from running again, Gifford Pinchot opted to run for the United States Senate once again in 1926. The incumbent was George Wharton Pepper, a Republican who had been a very well-respected attorney who had been appointed to succeed Boies Penrose in 1922. Pepper had subsequently been elected to serve the remaining four years of Penrose's term.

The campaign for the GOP nomination for the United States Senate quickly became a three-cornered fight between Governor Pinchot, Senator Pepper and Congressman William S. Vare of Philadelphia. Vare was the boss of the enormously powerful Philadelphia machine, which could produce astonishingly large majorities for its favored candidates.

Pinchot ran a distant third while Senator Pepper lost the GOP nomination to Congressman Vare by 81,000 votes. Vare only carried one county outside of Philadelphia, but his majority in his hometown was quite nearly a massive 224,000 votes. Governor Pinchot refused to certify Vare's win in the general election, pointing to instances of fraud and corruption. The expenditures by the Vare campaign and questionable results caused the Senate to refuse a seat to William S. Vare.

As Governor Pinchot gave his farewell message before the state legislature, the restless legislators suddenly snapped to attention when the chief executive mentioned "gangs." "After four years in a position to learn the facts, I am going out of office with the most hearty contempt not only for the morals and intentions but also for the minds of the gang politicians of Pennsylvania," Pinchot snapped. The governor denounced the "Mellon machine in Pittsburgh" and the "Mitten machine in Philadelphia" and said the machines were rife with "men who depend for the living and their power, on liquor, crime, vice." "These are the men the magnates buy," Pinchot sniffed. "These are the men they protect from time to time against the revolt of honest citizens who would otherwise destroy them."

As for the machine bearing the name of Andrew Mellon, the treasury secretary under presidents Harding and Coolidge, Governor Pinchot charged ordinarily respectable people "shut their eyes and make common cause with gangsters, vote thieves, dive keepers, criminals and harlots, because of the social and financial eminence of the Mellon name."

For his comments, the governor received a smattering of applause and a torrent of jeers and hisses from legislators. Four years later, Pinchot was back once again campaigning to recapture the governor's office. To the horror of the old guard, Pinchot won the primary election and the Republican nomination. While Pinchot carried Pittsburgh in the general election, the Philadelphia machine refused to back the former governor and supported the Democratic nominee, John Hemphill. The result was a very narrow win for Gifford Pinchot, who won with 50.77% of the vote. Part of the small margin of Pinchot's win was the increasing difficulty imposed upon people by the effects of the Great Depression.

During his second term, Pinchot once again wrestled with the budget while doing his best to help those who were suffering intensely due to the Depression. Governor Pinchot prodded the legislature to approve money to help the indigent and poor and worked during his last two years in office with President Franklin Roosevelt's administration.

Term-limited once again in 1934, Gifford Pinchot made a third bid for a seat in the United States Senate, challenging incumbent Senator David A. Reed, one of the louder voices against the New Deal in the chamber. Reed won the GOP nomination by almost 99,000 votes.

Gifford Pinchot's last hurrah in elective politics came during the 1938 election when he sought once again to return to the governor's mansion. Bitterly opposed by the few remnants of the machines, conservatives and the old guard, Pinchot campaigned gamely but lost decisively to Lieutenant Governor Arthur James.

For the rest of his life, Gifford Pinchot traded verbal blows with curmudgeonly Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes and remained active until he died on October 4, 1946, at age 81, a victim of leukemia.

Anxiety: The Invisible Storm

Imagine walking through a quiet, empty city at night. Put yourself there. The streets are familiar, but every shadow seems to move. Every distant sound, a car door slamming, a dog barking that

By Justin Pratt,
Clear Springs Baptist Church Senior Pastor

doesn't seem far away, a footstep echoing, feels amplified and even threatening. Your chest tightens. Your hands start to sweat, and your mind races with "what ifs" that begin to spiral out of control. You try to breathe, but each inhale feels heavy, each exhale shallow. Your body trembles even though nothing is attacking you, nothing is chasing you, yet the terror is as real as if it were. This is anxiety; an invisible storm that traps you in your own mind, making the ordinary feel dangerous and the familiar feel unsafe.

Anxiety is not imagination. It's not a trick of the mind or a weakness to overcome; it is real, tangible and relentless. It floods your brain with racing chemicals, ignites intrusive thoughts that refuse to let go, and sends your heart pounding as if your body is under siege. Your chest tightens, your breath catches and it can feel as though your very own mind has turned against you, locking you in a cage of fear and uncertainty. But listen carefully: This does not mean you are broken. It means that you are human. You are living in a world that is unpredictable, often overwhelming, and full of pressures beyond your control, and your mind is responding to the weight of it with the very mechanisms God designed to protect you.

The enemy's strategy is more than fear; it is to convince you that you are helpless, isolated, and defeated. Paul describes the spiritual side of this battle in 2 Corinthians 10:3-5 and says, "... the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds; casting down imaginations ... and bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ." The battlefield is in your mind. It's important to remember that God has given us powerful weapons to fight anxiety: a Word that dissolves lies, worship that lifts our eyes, and a Savior who has made us more than conquerors.

Imagine anxiety as a shadowy figure lurking in your mind, whispering doubts and fears. It tells you, "You're not safe. Something bad is coming!" But amid that storm, faith offers a different voice.

God says, "I am your refuge. I hold you even when the world feels like it's falling apart."

Anxiety persists: "You're alone. Nobody sees this battle." And yet, God assures, "I am near to the brokenhearted. I see every tear, every tremble of your heart."

When anxiety insists, "You can't handle this. You're trapped!" God responds, "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. You are not confined, and My power is at work in you."

Even in the moments when it seems hopeless, "This will never end. You're losing control", faith whispers back, "Trust Me. I hold all things together. My grace is sufficient, and My peace is yours if you will reach for it."

In the tug-of-war between fear and faith, there is a profound reminder: no matter how dark the shadow of anxiety, there is a voice of reassurance, strength and hope.

Victory over anxiety doesn't happen all at once. It begins moment by moment: one thought taken captive, one Scripture spoken, one act of worship chosen. As these moments accumulate, freedom begins to replace fear and peace starts to fill the spaces anxiety once dominated. Anxiety may be real, but so are God's promises. Fear does not get the final word. Step into His Word. Worship. Trust Him. Win the moment, one by one, and watch as anxiety's grip loosens, and the quiet, steady rhythm of peace begins to fill your life.

This Trailblazer hasn't quite burned out

By Steve Williams

Not every fire turns into a blaze. Some begin with a spark and never get going. Others are tiny and blow out quickly like a candle on a birthday cake. All fires, though, have a chance to be big and productive and clear paths for others.

The latter was like Lisa Myers in the world of sports, and specifically, high school sports. She played and coached for a long time and earned the title "Legacy Trailblazer" from the Tennessee Secondary Schools Athletic Association.

Galen Johnson struck the first match when he brought Lisa with him when he became the first principal at William Blount, the new high school in Blount County in 1979-80.

Lisa had been at Porter High for three years until that school was consolidated with other small high schools in Blount County. At Porter, she played 6-on-6 basketball and was a guard. That was the only sport Porter had.

In her only year at William Blount, Myers was a senior post player and part of the first team to shoot a basketball in its gym and the first to letter and captain four sports. She also was a member of the first girls basketball team in school history to play full-court basketball (5-on-5) and compete in the state tournament.

After her graduation from William Blount, she played college ball until she had an injury at UNC-Asheville. After college, she started working at UT hospital before deciding to teach and coach on the high school level. Mike Asquith offered her a position at Doyle High,

What does Myers cherish about her career?

"The connections you make," said Lisa Myers. "Not only the kids, but their parents, their brothers and sisters, cousins and their friends and the very fact that ninety-nine percent of the time everything was good and it was positive. And I received a great education in Blount County schools and I know the kids that we had in Knox County received a good education.

"It was like there was an invisible hand. Somebody was always pushing you to do better. You don't go backwards. You keep going forwards. And I hope I instilled that. Not only with the athletes, but the kids that were in my class. We don't quit. We do our best. Any job worth doing, it's worth doing your best. When you teach, you coach. I walked up and down the front of the class. I coach all day long. What I cherish the most is all the acquaintances I've met along the way."

which later became South-Doyle.

Lisa coached basketball and softball and helped with track, too. Later on, she did the announcing for baseball coach Robbie Howard's games for 14 years.

Myers taught for 26 years in all at South-Doyle.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS BASKETBALL Admirals celebrate Senior Night by dismantling Concord Christian

By Ken Lay

Farragut High School boys basketball coach J.P. Burris couldn't have scripted a better way for his team to celebrate Senior Night.

Sure, the contest was played 24 hours later than scheduled, but once the Admirals hit the hardwood, they took care of business in short order, routing Concord Christian School, 87-37, Wednesday night before a boisterous house at the Lynn E. Sexton Gymnasium.

Farragut (19-7) quickly put the contest away by opening a 34-10 lead in the first quarter. The Admirals would extend their advantage to 51-13 by halftime and all five senior starters, Continue on page 3

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS BASKETBALL

Farragut comes from behind to edge Lady Lions

By Ken Lay

Inclement winter weather has hindered preparations for Farragut High School's girls basketball team. School cancellations in recent days have caused games to be rescheduled.

It has also rendered the Lady Admirals unable to practice together.

Farragut has won its last three games over Lenoir City, Rhea County and Concord Christian School.

But those victories haven't been easy as the Lady Admirals have had more than their share of struggles, particularly on the offensive end of the floor.

In its most recent victory, Farragut (17-8) managed to score just 41 points against Concord (15-11).

But the Admirals' defense was clutch as it surrendered just 34 points in a 41-34 victory over the Lady Lions Wednesday night at the Lynn E. Sexton Gymnasium. It was a Senior Night victory, but it wouldn't win too many style points.

"It's been a struggle, and in our last three games now, we haven't looked very good," Farragut coach

Jason Mayfield said. "And that's a reflection of not being able to practice. This is why practice is important. "When school's closed, we can't practice, and I'm not knocking anybody, but it is what it is."

The coach was not all that happy about how his team has been handling its recent adversity.

"We've got to be tough. We've just got to be tougher than that," Mayfield said. "It's hard, but we have to be able to overcome that.

"For three-and-a-half quarters, this was a tight game."

Senior KJ McNealy was the only Farragut player to post double figures in the scoring column as she had 12 points. Lilly Mullins added eight points, and Reagan Sheridan and Zoe Porter finished with six points each. Continue on page 3

NATIONAL SIGNING DAY

Family members look over shoulders as (from L-R) Jace Ballard, Blake Perkey and Parker Whittaker sign scholarship papers at Grace Christian Academy last week.

Grace Christian's football signing day was joyful

By Steve Williams

A high school signing day is a lot about looking ahead, but also celebrating the past.

Grace Christian Academy had one like that last Wednesday morning and more.

The event was blessed and full of prayer.

With families and friends looking on, Jace Ballard, Blake Perkey and Parker Whittaker signed scholarship papers. Jace will be going to VMI, Blake to Wheaton College and Parker to Maryville College.

"Today is an exciting day for all of Grace Christian Academy and the three families that are represented are a big part of what we're doing here," said Coach Justin Price. "We are excited for what God has in store for Blake, Jace and Parker. As they continue this football journey, we believe God has big plans for them. We've already seen a little bit of it in high school. I think as they continue to grow and become the people that God's called them to be that they'll use football as an avenue to get there."

Whittaker, a 5-9, 210-pounder, was a middle linebacker at GCA and named second-team All-Region.

Parker came away from his recruiting visit really liking Maryville College.

"The direction the football program's going into is something that I can see myself playing for," he added. "They have a great coaching staff and when I went on a visit around November I just really felt at home there."

Whittaker won't forget the Carter game early in the season.

"I think the game was tied actually with about a minute left and I stripped the ball out of the running back's hand," he said, "and then we kicked the winning field goal shortly after."

Ballard, a Mr. Football semifinalist, played wide receiver, running back and a little bit of quarterback for the Rams and said he would be playing slotback at VMI.

"Not only is it a chance to play at the next level, it's also a very high academic school," said Jace. "I think they are ranked No. 4. If you graduate from there, you've got a good chance of being really successful in life."

Jace transferred and played only his senior season at Grace Christian, after spending his first three years at Lakeway Christian in White Pine.

Ballard's last season in high school included a big upset win at Sevier County. Beating the Smoky Bears was definitely a highlight.

"They were undefeated for so many games," said Jace. "I think it was 699 days or 599 days (since they had lost.) We just came in there as a brotherhood and we won."

Perkey, a wide receiver, unfortunately tore his hamstring in Week 5 of his senior year. But he's looking forward to playing at Wheaton College in Chicago. He was first team All-Region - Academic.

"I first heard about Wheaton from Jackson and Johnny Eller, two graduates from Grace," he said. "And they just said all good things about it and when I was looking at all the schools, Wheaton was just the total package and was what I was looking for. They had the best academics, the best athletics and it has a heavy emphasis on the schedule side of things. So overall it was just the best thing for me."

As an undergraduate, Blake plans to go into economics, but his ultimate goal is to go to law school and get a law degree.

Before his injury, Blake, like Parker, picked Carter as his favorite game. "It was a close game and we won on a field goal (by Braden Walker) and I had a punt return for a touchdown in that game. It was a really great game."

For many, National Signing Day is the culmination of a long recruiting journey!

Q&A with new Webb head coach George Quarles

By Mark Nagi

When you talk about HS football in East Tennessee, the name George Quarles often comes to mind. One of the most successful coaches in the state, Quarles won 94% of his games during his 18 years as the head coach at Maryville. The Rebels also won 11 state titles during that memorable run.

Since 2017, Quarles has been on the coaching staffs at Furman, ETSU and Austin Peay. His love of East Tennessee never wavered, and back in December, Quarles was back in the area, hired by Webb School to be the Spartans' new head coach.

The Knoxville Focus recently caught up with Quarles to find out how this went down and about his future football plans off Dutchtown Road in west Knoxville.

Knoxville Focus: George, how did you end up back in HS football at Webb?

George Quarles: I got a call from Ricky Norris (Webb School), whom I've known for a little while. At first, I was like, I just don't think I can do this. You know, I need to finish my state retirement. But knowing all along that we wanted to move back to East Tennessee. We had just lost my mom back in September. My Dad was by himself, and, you know, knowing that I needed to kind of get back closer and help out, help my sister with him. Plus, we just wanted to live back in the Maryville area. That's where our friends are. They called back, and four or five days later, I was like, all right, I'll talk to you and came over here at Thanksgiving and got a great feel from Ricky and Dan Gill, the athletic director. We just got a

The fire has begun smoldering now as Myers has been teaching U.S. Government, Economics and Personal Finance at Hardin Valley Academy for 15 years and plans to retire next December.

"For me, teaching is like coaching in that you're walking across the room all through class," she said.

Myers is in her 41st year of teaching in all.

After retirement, she plans to keep watching sports and fish as she lives on the lake.

And Lisa won't be alone as she lives with her son Skylar and granddaughter Evie, who is 7 months old.

The TSSAA Trailblazer

Award recognizes outstanding contributions in high school sports. This award is given to individuals who have made significant impacts in promoting sportsmanship, leadership, and community involvement within Tennessee high schools.

It wasn't too long ago, in the late 1980s, actually, that Alabama and Auburn were squabbling over the venue of the "Iron Bowl." Finally, Auburn drew a line in the sand. Auburn would play its "home games" in Auburn, a seemingly reasonable request in some circles, an unreasonable one in others.

Alabama threatened all kinds of repercussions, including canceling the series or keeping the game at Birmingham's Legion Field, a venue seemingly ordained by higher powers.

The "Iron Bowl" couldn't be played anywhere else, could it? That was the spin put out by Alabama and Birmingham civic and community leaders.

The games are now being played on each campus at stadiums much larger than Legion Field, and the rivalry hasn't suffered one iota. Alabama partisans who had once said "Never" to playing at Auburn, now head to Lee County every other year.

Alabama did get in one last shot at Auburn fans before the 1989 game, raising the specter of a

Tide win in the first game between the two rivals at Jordan-Hare Stadium.

Their comment, expressed in bumper stickers and other media, was to the point: "Your a-- on your grass."

That didn't happen. Auburn won, but this was the stuff of which great rivalries are made.

Closer to home, there were those across Big Orange Country who expressed great fear and trepidation relative to trips to Auburn, Ala., Starkville and Oxford, Miss., and even Athens, Ga., instead of Birmingham and Memphis, or in Georgia's case, not playing the Bulldogs at all between 1938 and 1967.

It took the Vols until 1974 to play in Auburn. They've been there to stay since 1980. Tennessee returned to Starkville in 1987 and Oxford in 1988 after a game at each venue in the early 1950s. Tennessee never played in Oxford before 1951 and had played in Starkville only three times (1910, 1920, and 1926).

It always seemed more convenient to go to Memphis to play Mississippi State or Ole Miss instead of Starkville or Oxford. Even the Bulldogs and Rebels thought it was a good idea.

All three teams have strong fan bases in Memphis and West Tennessee, but things always seemed strange about Tennessee being the visiting team against a Mississippi school in Memphis.

Community honchos in the Bluff City tried to get as many games in Crump Stadium as they could over the years, with games featuring Tennessee, Ole Miss, Mississippi State, and Arkansas, among others. There were day-night doubleheaders scheduled - Tennessee versus Ole Miss in the afternoon, Mississippi State versus Arkansas, in the evening, for example. Whatever Memphis city leaders did must have worked.

There was one trip to Starkville that was a comedy of errors. The year was 1950. To begin with, the Vol team plane landed at the wrong airport, one where grass was growing through the cracks in the concrete. Former Vol center Bob Davis remembered that facet of the trip well. Then the Vols lost to State 7-0.

After the game, another Bob, this time General Robert Neyland, reportedly told his players their only friends were the people on the plane with them. The Vols ended up 11-1 that season, playing and defeating Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

The series with Georgia resumed in 1968, and, with the advent of divisional play in the early 1990s, the series between the neighboring states is as hot and heavy as any Tennessee has played in recent years.

The first two games were something to behold. Tennessee stole a 17-17 tie on Sept. 14, 1968. Bubba Wyche tossed a controversial TD pass to Gary Kreis and a two-point conversion pass to Ken DeLong after the clock at the North end of Neyland Stadium had hit double zeroes.

Georgia folks thought they had Tennessee right where they wanted them on a rainy day in Athens on Nov. 1, 1969. However, in the game played between the legendary hedges, the Vols won 17-3. Curt Watson and Don McLeary each gained more than 100 yards rushing.

Vol fans also incessantly worried about having to play Memphis State, known as Memphis, in one of those games perceived by many in the Vol fan base as "nothing to gain, and everything to lose."

That series began in 1968, after some indelicate political wrangling. The Vols have won 22 of the 23 games played, but the 1996 game, Memphis 21, Tennessee 17, was a classic upset.

The rivalries may be more competitive and intense than ever, if that's possible.

The inexorable passage of time has a way of defusing nearly any game site controversy. But at the time these controversies arose, they were issues that engendered considerable debate and even rancor.

points each for the Lady Admirals, who trailed, 8-6, at the end of the first quarter. Concord extended its advantage to 21-16 by halftime. The Lady Lions held a narrow 27-26 edge in the third quarter.

"It was one of those games where you had to make some plays at the end and luckily, we did," Mayfield said.

Jason Mayfield earns milestone victory with Lady Admirals

When Jason Mayfield took the Farragut High School girls basketball head coaching job, he inherited one of the area's most successful programs, built by former coaches Mike Driver and Wes Edmonds.

Mayfield immediately made his mark on the program as Farragut battled against some of Tennessee's best players and teams.

Longtime regulars in the state sectional round of the playoffs, the Lady Admirals finally made the state tournament in 2022, where they reached the title game before losing to Kingston Pike rival Bearden.

"We came in here and inherited a successful program, and we built upon that and were able to continue that," said Mayfield, who won his 300th game recently when Farragut routed Oak Ridge, 55-35, on Friday, Jan. 23, at the Lynn E. Sexton Gymnasium. "It's partially a joke, but it's also true. "It means that I've been doing this a long time."

The Lady Admirals have since defeated Lenoir City, Rhea County and Concord Christian School, celebrating Senior Night with a 41-34 victory over the Lady Lions Wednesday night. Mayfield is now sitting on 303 lifetime wins.

"It's been a great ride for 14 years," he said. "I've been doing this for a long time, and I've had a lot of good players too."

"We have good kids here, and this is a testament to their character and to the kind of players they are."

While his tenure at Farragut has been packed with excitement and some big wins, there have been a few hard times as well.

"The first three years I was here, we lost three (state sectional) games, and we lost two of those on last-second shots, and those were hard to take," Mayfield said. "But you learn from those, too."

Mayfield refuses to take credit for his success. Instead, he lauds his players and also a solid group of assistant coaches, including several former Lady Admirals, who have come back to work in Farragut's program.

The former Lady Admirals who are working or have worked in the program include: Alex Munday (who played before Mayfield was the coach), Madison Maples, Claire Wyatt and Kristen Freeman.

Another former assistant, Jesse Booher, played for Mayfield when he was an assistant coach with the Karns boys. Another former assistant, Jessica Sweat, was a star player at Halls High School, and still another, Andy Arendt, is the head boys coach at Hardin Valley Academy.

"We've had a lot of greats, whether it's Alex, Madison or Jessica (who spent multiple seasons with the program), or Claire and Kristen, who had one year to help before medical school," Mayfield said. "Jesse is a former player. He played for me at Karns."

"And Andy, he's the head boys coach at Hardin Valley, and he's doing great things over there."

Admirals celebrate Senior Night by dismantling Concord Christian due to the lopsidedness of the game, were able to exit the contest one-by-one, and each received a standing ovation from the biased Farragut crowd.

The Admirals are in the midst of a successful season and Burris said that the senior class, which is comprised of Daniel Lanning, Britton Lewis, Reid Vining, Parker Lane and Aidan Foshie, starts for Farragut. Another senior, team manager Hayden Duncan, was also honored. He played against the Lions and knocked down a 3-pointer, sending the fans into a frenzy.

Duncan became a manager after an injury cut his high school playing career short.

"It was the first Senior Night since I've been here that the game hasn't been competitive," Burris said. "It's been a hectic week because of the snow. We haven't been able to practice much because of the snow, but It's definitely been a fun year.

"All six of these guys have been fun to coach. They play as a team and they played as a team tonight. We were able to do the things that you want to do on a Senior Night."

All six of the senior honorees scored Thursday night against Concord, which made a short trip up Kingston Pike to play in the game, which was originally scheduled to be played Tuesday but was canceled due to inclement winter weather.

Vining led the way with 16 points. Lewis added 11, while Lanning and Lane scored 10 each. Foshie had seven and Duncan, who dressed for the game, made his long-range jumper, which was one of the highlights of the night.

Austin-East baseball players work out in the weightroom Friday. The Roadrunners also will be on the field today for the TSSAA's first official practice date.

What are the plans to get the A-E baseball program turned around?

By Steve Williams

The new coaching staff at Austin-East High School has already seen transfers in preseason workouts who can upgrade the long-suffering Roadrunners' program. They expect to see improvement too when the team takes the field for the TSSAA's first official practice day this afternoon (Feb. 9).

Head Coach Sanford Smith, Assistant Coach Gaylord Gibson and volunteer coach Greg Freeman

are looking forward to it. The coaches say the plan to turn the baseball program around includes continually working with the players by encouraging them and letting them know that it takes dedication plus working on the physical and mental aspects of the game. Secondly, it is imperative that the feeder program at Claude Walker Ball Park works for its community. The Emerald Youth middle school program also continues to develop players in the community. The coaches also are in the process of starting some camps and clinics in the community and seeking outsources to assist with indoor facilities that would further the players' skill development. The coaches feel that this would go a long way in fast tracking player development.

Developing contacts with area JUCO programs, community colleges and four-year universities could lead to Austin-East prospects getting recruited. The coaches feel that they already have some players who are displaying some skill sets that could possibly get them a look at the collegiate level.

The A-E coaching staff also has reached out to some former Major League Baseball coaches and players that the coaches have relationships with, and they have already started sending the coaches' information to help with practice plans and player development. The coaches also are staying on top of the players in stressing that being successful in the classroom and displaying good conduct translates into becoming a successful all-around student.

In closing, the coaches want to add that they have been impressed with the number of players who have come out for the team, their willingness to work hard and speak with other athletes at the school about joining the Roadrunner baseball team.

The A-E coaches also would like to see their players continue to play baseball together in the summer until fall sports begin.

great feel for their commitment to getting things rolling here. We really like the people. They felt like people we wanted to be around. We're excited.

KF: What are your thoughts on the current state of the Webb program?

GQ: I don't know how quick a fix it's going to be. Numbers were low. I think they finished the year because of injuries and other things, with like 20-something kids on the team. That's not a really good recipe for a football team. So, we are trying to build it and build it the right way that's sustainable, hopefully from the ground up with your middle school and all those things. That's kind of the goal here.

KF: What will your staff look like, and do you anticipate any turnover?

GQ: Some assistant coaches are coming back, some aren't. We are trying to get more guys who are in the building. I think that was one of the tough things for Don (Mahoney, former HC). I think he was the only teacher or the only coach who had a job in the building. It's just hard when you don't have your staff there. They're either in other schools or have other jobs outside of education. It's just hard getting a staff together that way. I've been pretty slow about hiring staff. But Don is going to come back and coach the offensive line.

KF: I remember when you coached in Maryville, there was a lot of stuff that you were doing offensively that was more spread-based. Over the years, everybody kind of now does that in a way. Is that still your main philosophy? Would you like to see Webb in a different direction?

GQ: I want to see what we can do. What best fits our personnel? Do we have a quarterback? I don't know. I've kind of dabbled in about everything, believe it or not. I went to Furman, and we messed around with some option stuff, so I've been good and bad about a lot of these offenses. So, just trying to figure out what best fits our personnel. I think it will be key, and that's what the spring practice will be for. There's just not a ton of players, and some of them I hadn't seen really because they're in basketball, they're in wrestling, or they're already in baseball. I've seen them in the hallways, but I've not gotten to, you know, work out with them or any of that stuff. So, there'll be some unknown for a while. And I think that happens in a smaller school.

KF: What message do you have for Webb parents, boosters and fans?

GQ: We're excited, and when I say we, it's our family. We're excited to be here and excited for the opportunity. We're excited for the challenge and can't wait to see what the future holds. It's a process. It may take a little while to get to where everybody wants it. But you're getting my full efforts. I'm all in. Hopefully, we can get it flipped around as quickly as possible.
